QR CODES ARE EVERYWHERE. SO ARE FRAUDSTERS.

Fraud can sound scary - especially when it involves something as innocent as a QR code. Protect yourself from fraud related to QR codes with a little bit of education.

HOW FRAUDSTERS ARE USING QR CODES:

Although it has a cute name (quishing), fraudsters are now using QR codes to try to get personal details or have you install malware on your device after scanning a code. The criminals can then use the details or malware to access your accounts and sensitive information.

HOW TO AVOID “QUISHING:”

- Don't scan QR codes from unsolicited emails/texts: Treat QR codes like suspicious links and always take extra caution.
- Check for tampering: If a physical QR code looks like a sticker on top of another, it may be malicious.
- Use your bank's app directly: If a QR code claims to link to online banking or payments, open your official app instead.
- Use your phone's native camera: Use the QR code scanner built into your smartphone's camera instead of a third-party app. This is often a more secure option.
- Never enter sensitive information via an unverified QR code. If you scan a code and are taken to a site asking for your password, credit card number, or personal data, close it immediately. Instead, go to the official website directly.

YOU'VE GOT THIS.

Even though it can seem overwhelming to stay ahead of the fraudsters, you've got this.
