The power to not get tricked by fraudsters is in your hands. Here are three habits you can adopt to keep your private information, well, private.

Make your usernames and passwords more complex.

Passwords like 123456 are too simple. Use a random password creator when possible. You can also create a complex password of your own such as d0gTreet4!3#.

Keep those complex usernames and passwords private.

No matter what the email or text says, never share your username or password. These items are private to you, and we will never call and ask you for them.

Monitor your accounts.

Review your bank accounts including your credit cards to spot any unusual transactions.
